

Anderson Public Library Community Bulletin Board Policy

The Anderson Public Library community bulletin board serves as a means of communication for the public to advertise non-profit civic, cultural or educational services and events in the Madison County community. Political or religious advertisements may only promote activities or services that are open to the public and may not promote specific beliefs. Notices of items for sale or commercial services may not be posted.

Acceptance of materials does not indicate that such materials will be displayed in the library. All bulletin board postings will be reviewed by the Information Services manager before they are posted. Exceptions to the posting guidelines must be approved by the library director. The library reserves the right to determine what shall be exhibited.

Posting of materials does not necessarily indicate the library's endorsement of the service or event promoted by those materials.

Materials posted will not be returned and will be discarded when removed. The library reserves the right to remove items from the bulletin board at any time.
