

A healthier community means a healthier future for your company.

That's where Families First comes in. Everyone has a family, or needs that kind of support to reach their full potential. Since 1835, we've helped families with life's challenges and changes. We provide counseling, education, crisis intervention, and other supports to help people get through the obstacles they face in their lives.

Families First would love to be the good cause you support. Your support, through sponsorship and employee engagement, creates a framework to help thousands of families and others in our local neighborhoods meet their full potential.

What we do:

At Families First, we build a framework of stability and wellbeing for each individual and the family that surrounds them. This framework creates an environment where children are nurtured, feel safe, and grow up resilient.

- We support people and families through the stresses of day-to-day life and in times of healing, recovery, and crisis.
- We offer families treatment and support for many problems that are tough to address alone: substance use; mental health issues; domestic violence, sexual assault and abuse; and more.
- We're there for older and challenged adults who need support to live in safety and dignity.
- Our crisis and suicide intervention 24-hour hotline is just a call or text away—every day of the year. We literally save lives.
- We advocate for public policy that strengthens and supports populations facing the greatest need and greatest disparities in reaching their full potential.
- Our support for families with children helps prevent future crises and builds a more hopeful and resilient generation for tomorrow.

Individuals and families receive counseling, education, and support on a sliding fee scale thanks to generous support from engaged organizations like yours.
