THE CULTURE OF WINE MAKING IN THE ORIENT!

TURKEY

Turkish wine was the first wine existing in the planet by Dionysus. With its wealth of climates, soils, vines and history of wine production, Turkey clearly has the quality and grows annually more than 1,000 types of grapes. Indigenous varieties such as the Crisp, white Narince, the fragrant Muscat or bold reds including the firmly structured Bogazkere and the punchier, meatier Okuzgozu are Turkey's local varieties which are recognised and awarded internationally.

LEBANON

Lebanon is among the oldest sites of wine production in the world due to that Wine played an important part in Phoenician religion, and the Greek-Roman god Dionysus – Bacchus may have originated in the wine rituals of Canaan.

The French influence between the World Wars promoted a culture of wine drinking, as did the sophisticated Mediterranean culture of Beirut at that time. Lebanese winemakers have favoured French grapes, particularly Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot and Rhone varieties such as Cinsault, Carignan and Grenache. There are also grapes that are specific and indigenous to Lebanon such as Obaideh and Merwah.

MOROCCO

Morocco's wine – A hidden Treasure! Winemaking in Morocco has a vast history. There is evidence that this northern region of Africa produced wines as far back as 2,500 years ago.

Most of the wine produced in Morocco is red, and include varieties such as Syrah, Grenache, and Carignan, Cabernet Sauvignon and Merlot. For those who prefer white, a Chardonnay, Chenin blanc or Sauvignon blanc goes very well with the Moroccan food.
