

Johnson County Public Library COMPUTER AND INTERNET POLICY

Johnson County Public Library (JCPL) is pleased to offer access to the Internet from computer workstations available to our patrons at every Library location. Computer access is intended for JCPL cardholders in good standing and guests

JCPL staff makes every effort to keep the computer workstations and printers updated and in good working condition. The Library, however, is not responsible for equipment failures and network outages which result in lost data and uncompleted work. The Library is not responsible for any personal information transmitted by computer users over Library networks, including passwords and other personal identifiers. Internet records and search history are deleted on a regular basis for patron confidentiality.

Printing is available from Library computers for a fee. If you have questions or need assistance, please ask Library staff for help.

Staff provides limited instructional assistance for all users. Users needing additional training are encouraged to sign up for a Book-a-Librarian session. See the Reference Librarian for details.

The demand for use of the computer workstations may exceed the available supply. Users may be asked to limit their computer session when others are waiting to use a workstation.

As with all Library resources, the Library affirms the right and responsibility of parents and guardians, not Library staff, to determine and monitor their children's use of the Internet. Parents may add or remove computer access privileges from their children's (under 17 years of age) library card at any time by speaking to Library staff.

Open, unsecured wireless networks are available in the Library's branches. Use of the wireless networks is subject to all the conditions in this policy.
