"Nosferatu: A Symphony of Horror"
Clark Wilson, organ

The quintessential vampire movie, this "Symphony of Horror" is perfect for a Halloween tradition at Walt Disney Concert Hall. In this nightmarish tale adapted from Dracula by master director F.W. Murnau, Max Schreck's vampire spreads like a plague across Europe, haunting all who cross his path. The film was shot mostly on location – a huge innovation for 1922 – and includes various imaginative effects, each shown more clearly than ever in this newly restored print. With theater organist Clark Wilson accompanying on the Hall's organ, this is a revival you won't want to miss.

Light of the Stable: Christmas with Emmylou Harris

Emmylou Harris, vocalist
Buddy Miller, guitar

Joined by illustrious guitarist Buddy Miller, the mesmerizing and lonesome vocals of Emmylou Harris will resonate with holiday spirit in this specially-created Christmas show. A Nashville native, Harris is a legend in country, folk, and pop, yet still an innovator in her vocal style and gift for discovering the heart of a song. Hymn-like and majestic, lost souls will be found at this evening of seasonal and spiritual music.

Peter Schickele meets P.D.Q. Bach
Los Angeles Philharmonic
Joana Carneiro, conductor

Take a break from traditional holiday fare for something completely different as Peter Schickele, the composer, performer and satirist best known as the tireless rehabilitator of (the fictional) P.D.Q. Bach (1807-1742?), gleefully skewers the conventions of classical music through his own brands of concert hall antics and musical mayhem.
